By the King.

Forasmuch as his Maiestie vnderstandeth, that there be diuers ancient and other good and necessary Lawes and Statutes of this his Kingdome of England, which do inflict and impose diuers grieuous Corporall and pecuniarie paynes and punishments, extending in some cases to sentence of death (the last and greatest punishment,) and in some cases to finall exile and banishment out of their naturall Country for euer, vpon such as vnlawfully hunt or enter into any Forrest, Parke, Chase, or Warren, to kill or destroy any Deere or Game with any Dogs, Nets, Gunnes, Crossebowes, Stonebowes or other Instruments, Engines, or meanes whatsoeuer, or by any such vnlawful meanes or deuises to spoile or destroy the Game of Pheasants, Partridges, Hearne, Mallard, & such like. And also diuers other good Lawes and Statutes, prouided for the preuenting of the sayd offences, and therefore do prohibite vpon great paines and penalties aswell the hauing or keeping, as the vsing of any Deere Hayes, Buckstalles, Dogges, Gunnes, Crossebowes, Nettes and other Engines, as by the same Lawes and Statutes appeareth: And yet his Maiestie vnderstandeth withall, that the same good Lawes and Statutes haue had (especially of late time) little or no effect, in respect there hath not bene any due execution (the life of all Lawes) of the same, by such to whom the Care and Charge thereof appertayned: by meanes whereof, such boldnesse and disobedience hath growen, specially in the vulgar sort, as that of late yeeres, the seuerall games aboue mentioned, haue bene more excessiuely and outragiously spoyled and destroyed, then hath bene attempted and practised in former ages. His Maiestie intending a due and speedy reformation of the sayd abuses and offences, And that the sayd good Lawes and Statutes hereafter put in due execution, And yet of his princely Clemencie and Benignitie, now in the beginning of his most happy and prosperous Reigne towards all his Louing Subiects, is graciously pleased, and doth by these presents vouchsafe to publish to all his Subiects his intention and determination therein, to the end that none of them, (which his Maiestie desireth) might hereafter incurre the seueritie and punishment of his sayd Lawes and Statutes: but like good and naturall Subiects for their owne safetie and good, obey and obserue the same. And therefore doth straightly charge and commaund all and euery person and persons, of what estate and degree soeuer, not to Hunt, Kill, Take, or destroy, by any of the wayes or meanes aboue sayd, or by any other vnlawfull meane, deuice, or inuention whatsoeuer, any of the Games aboue said, contrary to any of the afore said Lawes or Statutes: Nor that they haue, keepe, or vse any of the sayd Deere-hayes, Buckstalles, Dogges, Gunnes, Crossebowes, Nettes, and other things aboue mentioned, or any of them, contrary to any of the sayd Lawes or Statutes. And that if any person or persons, shall, after this Proclamation made and published, offend in any of the premises, against any of the sayd Lawes and Statutes, that then he shall not onely vndergo and suffer the seuere sentence and punishment of the same, aswell for such offences hereafter to be attempted or done, as for the like offences formerly committed, but also such paynes and penalties as may be inflicted vpon such as wilfully contemne and disobey his Commaundement Royall. And his Maiestie doeth further Charge and Commaund all Iustices, Officers and Ministers whatsoeuer, to whome in these Cases it doth appertaine, that they from henceforth diligently and carefully looke to the due executing, aswell of the sayd Lawes and Statutes and euery of them, as of his Maiesties pleasure and Royall Commaundement, signified and declared by these presents, And that without respect of any person or persons of what estate or degree soeuer, as they will answere the contrary at their vttermost perill.

Giuen at our Manour of Greenwich the sixteenth day of May in the first yeere of our Reigne of England, France and Ireland, and in the fyre and thirtieth of Scotland.

God saue the King.
